The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hesselbom 6014313 and applicant's admitted prior art.

Hesselbom discloses in figure 1, for example, first and second semiconductor stacks on a support plate 19 (and optionally 7) wherein each chip (3,3') and thermal element 15 can be chosen according to desired circuit configurations and wherein chips 3 and 3' develop different amounts of heat, or have different power requirements (col.10, lines 60-67). The chips can communicate between planes as well as between stacks through radiating layers 1 (col.4, lines 1-3). Plates 1 are optionally formed of a material having high thermal conductivity (col.11, lines 1-5). An IC is formed between the stacks (fig.1).

Hesselbom does not disclose specific circuit configurations for the stacks. Applicant admits formation of bridge circuits employing 4 semiconductor chips as well as stacking of chips in a bridge circuit to have been known prior to applicant's invention (instant pages 1-2). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to combine the known teachings with those of Hesselbom to enable formation of the bridge circuit of the prior art according to the teachings of Hesselbom that chips forming a circuit can be employed as discussed above and further to obtain the cooling benefits disclosed by Hesselbom when using IC's producing larger amounts of heat.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to George Fourson whose telephone number is (571) 272-1860. The examiner can normally be reached on Monday through Friday.
